Introduction to the panel
The main challenges of African education systems: quality, type of teachers, resources, role of private learning time

How to meet these challenges to move towards a culture of peace?

Pi's your solution: promote universal values in school

Will these values be drawn from hearts? The 're family? Les beliefs (religions)? The art traditions?

Discussion
All interventions tend to pose the problem of African education systems in terms of inadequacy with endogenous local values.

African education systems are still modeled after the Western model which often contrast with the socio cultural values Africans.

The proposals were made in the sense of valuing the endogenous cultures in the content of the programs of the educational systems.

Recommendations
- Africa must take ownership of its education system;
- Programs must be revisited;
- Endogenous values must be reflected in the content of programs education;
- It requires a significant implication of the key actors of the school (families, religious leaders, customary leaders);
- States that are already making great efforts for the right to education must continue and assume the search for harmonization by securing the whole and by assuming the financing of education systems by also involving parents and private
- The teaching of values within the education systems as well as at the level of the families will be the guarantee of the harmony of hearts and minds and consequently of peace.
